Volcanoes? In the Bay Area?!?! Not too many people are aware that we have a volcano in our own backyard, at Sibley Volcanic Regional Park. This 3.5 mile trail with 554 elevation gain, has everything to offer from panoramic views of the surrounding hills and valleys, to the way the trail starts out in heavy forestland. If you ever are curious of how the landscape was formed here you can tell the story simply from the rock formations. This is a great hike for the kids, the family, and even the Grandparents. There is truly something every person can appreciate about this hike. Make sure to grab a brochure and have some fun!

BE CAREFUL: There are many different trails which connect to the Round Top Skyline Trail, so make sure not to veer off in any direction, just stay on the trail in front of you.
