The Wildcat to Nimitz trail is Easy to Moderate difficulty. The distance is 8.4 miles, which may seem like a lot, but the elevation gain is only 984. For the most part there are no sharp inclines, so that makes things a lot easier for less seasoned hikers. There are plenty of things to see on this trip too: from the shaded creek beds, to the rolling hills the East Bay is so famous for. There are also places on the hike which offer breathtaking views of Mount Diablo, San Pablo Bay, San Francisco, Oakland, and the Golden Gate Bridge (which connects San Francisco to Marin County). There really isn't anything you can't see on this hike, and more often than not, the weather is delightful.
